Written by Marco Attard
27. January 2017

Following unfortunate Christmas season delays Bragi starts shipping its Apple AirPods rival, the Headphone-- a set of wireless earbuds one can describe as stripped down version of Bragi's previous Dash earbuds.

First revealed back in September 2016 , the Headphone earbuds are similar to the Dash, with a similar size, overall design and basic function. However they lack the fitness tracking, built-in storage features and touch-sensitive control features. The result? Lower cost wireless earbuds promising 6 hours of battery life for audio playback (double that of the Dash) and 250 hours of standby time.

A feature retained from the Dash is the "Audio Transparency" passive noise isolation, while control comes through 3 physical buttons.

As mentioned earlier the Headphone earbuds are available now with a variety of accessories, including the Leash (connects earbuds together) and extra FitSleeves in multiple sizes.

Go Bragi The Headphone