

HTC announces the latest addition to the Desire smartphone family-- the Desire 10, a midrange handset available in 2 variants, one named Lifestyle, the other Pro.

Both versions have a 5.5-inch display and run on Android 6.0, but are otherwise fairly different. The Pro is higher-specced model, with a 1080p resolution display, MediaTek Helio P10 CPU, 3 or 4GB RAM, 32 or 64GB storage, 20MP rear-facing camera, 13MP front-facing camera, 3000mAh battery and a rear-mounted fingerprint scanner.

On the other hand the Lifestyle has a 720p display, Qualcomm Snapdragon 400 CPU, 2 or 3GB RAM, 16 or 32GB storage, 13MP rear camera, 5MP front camera, 24-bit Hi-Res certified audio, 2700mAh battery and no fingerprint scanner.

The Desire 10 Lifestyle is available now in European markets, with the Pro to follow from October.

Go HTC Desire 10