

A Gold-Plated iPhone to Celebrate Trump

Written by Marco Attard
18. November 2016

Customers with wallets weighed down by too much money wanting to celebrate the electoral victory of one Donald Trump can perhaps do so with a gold-plated iPhone 7, courtesy of Russian company Caviar.

Dubbed the "Supremo Trump Changeover," the iPhone 7 features a glitzy gold-plated design the Donald himself would surely approve of. Caviar insists it is "an expression of hope for a rapprochement between Russia and the United States and that of the benevolent words Trump and Russia will follow the actions that will lead to a change in relations between the great powers for the better." Which is fair enough, we guess.

Gold-plating aside, the iPhone 7 remains identical to that available in stores worldwide, and comes with either 32, 128 and 256GB of storage. Part of what Caviar calls the "Supremo" range, it joins a selection of gaudy iPhones adorned with the visages of Russian president Vladimir Putin, Azerbaijan's Ilham Aliyev and Kazakhstan president Nursultan Nazarbayev.

The Supremo Trump Changeover is available now for all of $3000.

Go Supremo Trump Changeover