

Samsung, Orange Team Up in Enterprise Tablets

Written by Marco Attard
11. October 2013

Orange and Samsung sign a "strategic partnership agreement" for the development of enterprise tablets and services with emphasis on European territories, specifically Belgium, France, Poland and Spain.

The agreement has the two companies co-developing business solutions, with Orange connectivity, services integration, device management and security expertise to Samsung services and devices.

"The tablet is revolutionising the enterprise market providing a new platform to rethink business processes," Orange says. "The partnership enables enterprises to seize this opportunity and is part of our ambition to support companies' digital transformation."

Thus enterprise tablet users will be able to make use of security enhancements through the integration of Samsung KNOX end-to-end security with the Orange Mobile Device management solution. Further in the future Samsung will install Orange services (including customer support, device management and deployment services) to enterprise tablets.

"The enterprise market is one of the biggest beneficiaries of mobile innovation," Samsung says. "Through this partnership, Samsung and Orange can provide customers with turn-key offerings that encompass devices, solutions, services, and connectivity to enhance productivity."

Samsung, Orange Team Up in Enterprise Tablets

Written by Marco Attard
11. October 2013

Go Orange Business Services and Samsung Sign Strategic Partnership Agreement