Clickfree launches a wireless version of its backup devices, Clickfree Wireless.

Users plug the device into each of their computers for a single time (to perform an initial backup). The device performs the following backups automatically through 802.11n wireless, without it being connected to any computer.

Clickfree's Backuplink technology handles all backup procedures.

It also allows users to easily upload, email or burn to CD/DVD their photo files, and can archive iPod/iPhone music and playlists.

The Clickfree Wireless is currently available in a 500GB model, with larger capacities to be out in Q1 2011.
