Written by Marco Attard
27. May 2016

Accessory maker Speck combines mobile VR viewers with smartphone cases with the Pocket-VR-- a collapsible, portable VR headsets users can combine with the company's Candyshell Grip cases.

Available in versions compatible with the iPhone 6, the larger 6s and the Samsung Galaxy S7, the Pocket-VR is a black plastic device. It ships together with a black and gray CandyShell Grip case, and users can snap the viewer over the case in order to check out VR experiences on the go.

VR experiences come through Google's Cardboard iOS/Android app.

When not in use the Pocket-VR folds flat for easy stowing in one's pocket, while the CandyShell Grip promises military-grade protection complete with raised bezels and raised rubber ridges for a solid grip.

The Pocket-VR is available now.

Go Speck Pocket-VR